

assistance of YURI LEBEDEV, the defendant, and owned by a co-conspirator not identified herein ("CC-1"). Through Coin.mx, MURGIO, LEBEDEV, and their co-conspirators enabled their customers to exchange cash for Bitcoins, charging a fee for their service. In total, between approximately October 2013 and July 2015, Coin.mx exchanged millions of dollars for Bitcoins on behalf of customers throughout the United States, including in the Southern District of New York.

THE COIN.MX SCHEME

4. At all times relevant to this Indictment, ANTHONY R. MURGIO, the defendant, knowingly operated Coin.mx in violation of federal anti-money laundering laws and regulations, including those requiring money services businesses like Coin.mx to meet registration and reporting requirements set forth by the United States Treasury Department.

5. ANTHONY R. MURGIO and YURI LEBEDEV, the defendants, and their co-conspirators engaged in substantial efforts to evade detection of their unlawful Bitcoin exchange scheme by operating through a phony front-company called "Collectables Club," and by maintaining a corresponding phony "Collectables Club" website. In doing so, MURGIO, LEBEDEV, and their co-conspirators sought to trick the major financial institutions through which they operated into believing their unlawful Bitcoin exchange business was simply a members-only association of individuals who discussed, bought, and sold collectable items, such as stamps and sports memorabilia.

6. In furtherance of the unlawful Coin.mx scheme, ANTHONY R. MURGIO, the defendant, opened bank accounts at U.S. financial institutions, including at a bank branch located in the Southern District of New York, in the name of "Collectables Club." MURGIO knowingly and falsely represented to these banks that the accounts were opened to operate a members-only association of collectables and memorabilia enthusiasts, when in truth and in fact, and as MURGIO and his co-conspirators well knew, the accounts were opened to function, and did in fact function, as operating accounts for their unlawful Coin.mx Bitcoin exchange business.

7. In addition to lying to financial institutions to obtain bank accounts for his unlawful business, ANTHONY R. MURGIO, the defendant, and his co-conspirators deceived U.S. banks and credit card issuers into authorizing credit and debit card payment and ACH transactions to purchase Bitcoins through Coin.mx. In particular, MURGIO and his co-conspirators deliberately misidentified and miscoded customers' credit and debit card transactions, in violation of bank and credit card company rules and regulations, and limited the dollar amount of individual transactions engaged in by their customers, in order to trick banks into allowing the transactions to be completed, and avoid arousing suspicion from the banks.

8. Also in furtherance of their unlawful Coin.mx scheme, ANTHONY R. MURGIO, the defendant, and his co-conspirators knowingly instructed customers of Coin.mx to lie to banks about the Bitcoin exchange transactions the customers were executing through Coin.mx, and to state falsely that they were for the exchange of collectables items, and not for Bitcoins.

9. In approximately 2014, in an effort to evade potential scrutiny from financial institutions and others about the nature of Coin.mx, ANTHONY R. MURGIO and YURI LEBEDEV, the defendants, and their co-conspirators acquired control of HOPE FCU, a federal credit union in New Jersey with primarily low-income members. TREVON GROSS, the defendant, who was the Chairman of the Board of HOPE FCU, allowed MURGIO, LEBEDEV, and their co-conspirators to take control of HOPE FCU and assisted their efforts in exchange for bribes, which GROSS directed MURGIO to pay to bank accounts under GROSS's control. In furtherance of this bribery scheme, LEBEDEV offered to pay $41,000 of his own money in bribes to GROSS. In total, MURGIO and his co-conspirators, at GROSS's direction, paid over $150,000 to accounts under GROSS's control. GROSS, in turn, spent proceeds from the bribes on personal expenses, including payments on his personal credit cards. Thereafter, and with GROSS's assistance, MURGIO installed his co-conspirators, including LEBEDEV, on HOPE FCU's board of directors and transferred Coin.mx's banking operations to HOPE FCU. MURGIO, LEBEDEV, and their co-conspirators operated HOPE FCU as a captive bank for their unlawful Bitcoin exchange until at least early 2015.
